- 6) Steel Leg Tubing: 1.05" O.D. x .073" wall, 45% high-carbon content structural steel tubing. Top cross tube rests on apron flange and transmits load from top through channel to floor.
- 7) Steel Leg Brace (Not Shown): Four - 1/4" x 3/4" x 38-1/4" L steel braces on end leg and three - 32" L on center leg and are fastened to leg and brace bracket with 1/4" solid rivets; AISI C1008 steel - max. hardness, Rockwell B-60.
- 8) Brace Bracket: Two brackets per brace .075" thick steel fastened to platform top with two #10 x 11/16", type A, full threaded, hardened metal screws and one 1/4" flat-head bolt set into platform top.
- 9) Double Center Aprons: Platform has two separate apron channel assemblies welded together and centered in the middle of platform for added rigidity.
- 10) Crutch Tip Rubber tip covers leg tube end with .065" thick washer inside tip for extra strength and non-slip floor contact.

48" x 96" Specification: These specifications are based on the standard Mitchell Model No. D48 48" x 96" x 32" Stage Platforms. All other units comply with general structure, materials, quality and construction of this specification.

Marquette University School of Engineering has performed Dead Load-Live Load testing of Mitchell Platforms and Risers with the following results:

" Stage and Riser units tested withstood the required 200 lb/sq. ft. live load plus approximately 25% of that live load plus horizontal load equal to 10% of the required live load without any noticeable failure or permanent deformation of any part of the unit, and shall be considered as having passed this test without exceptions or reservations."

Pill Testing: Passes DOC FF 1-70
Class A Tunnel Testing

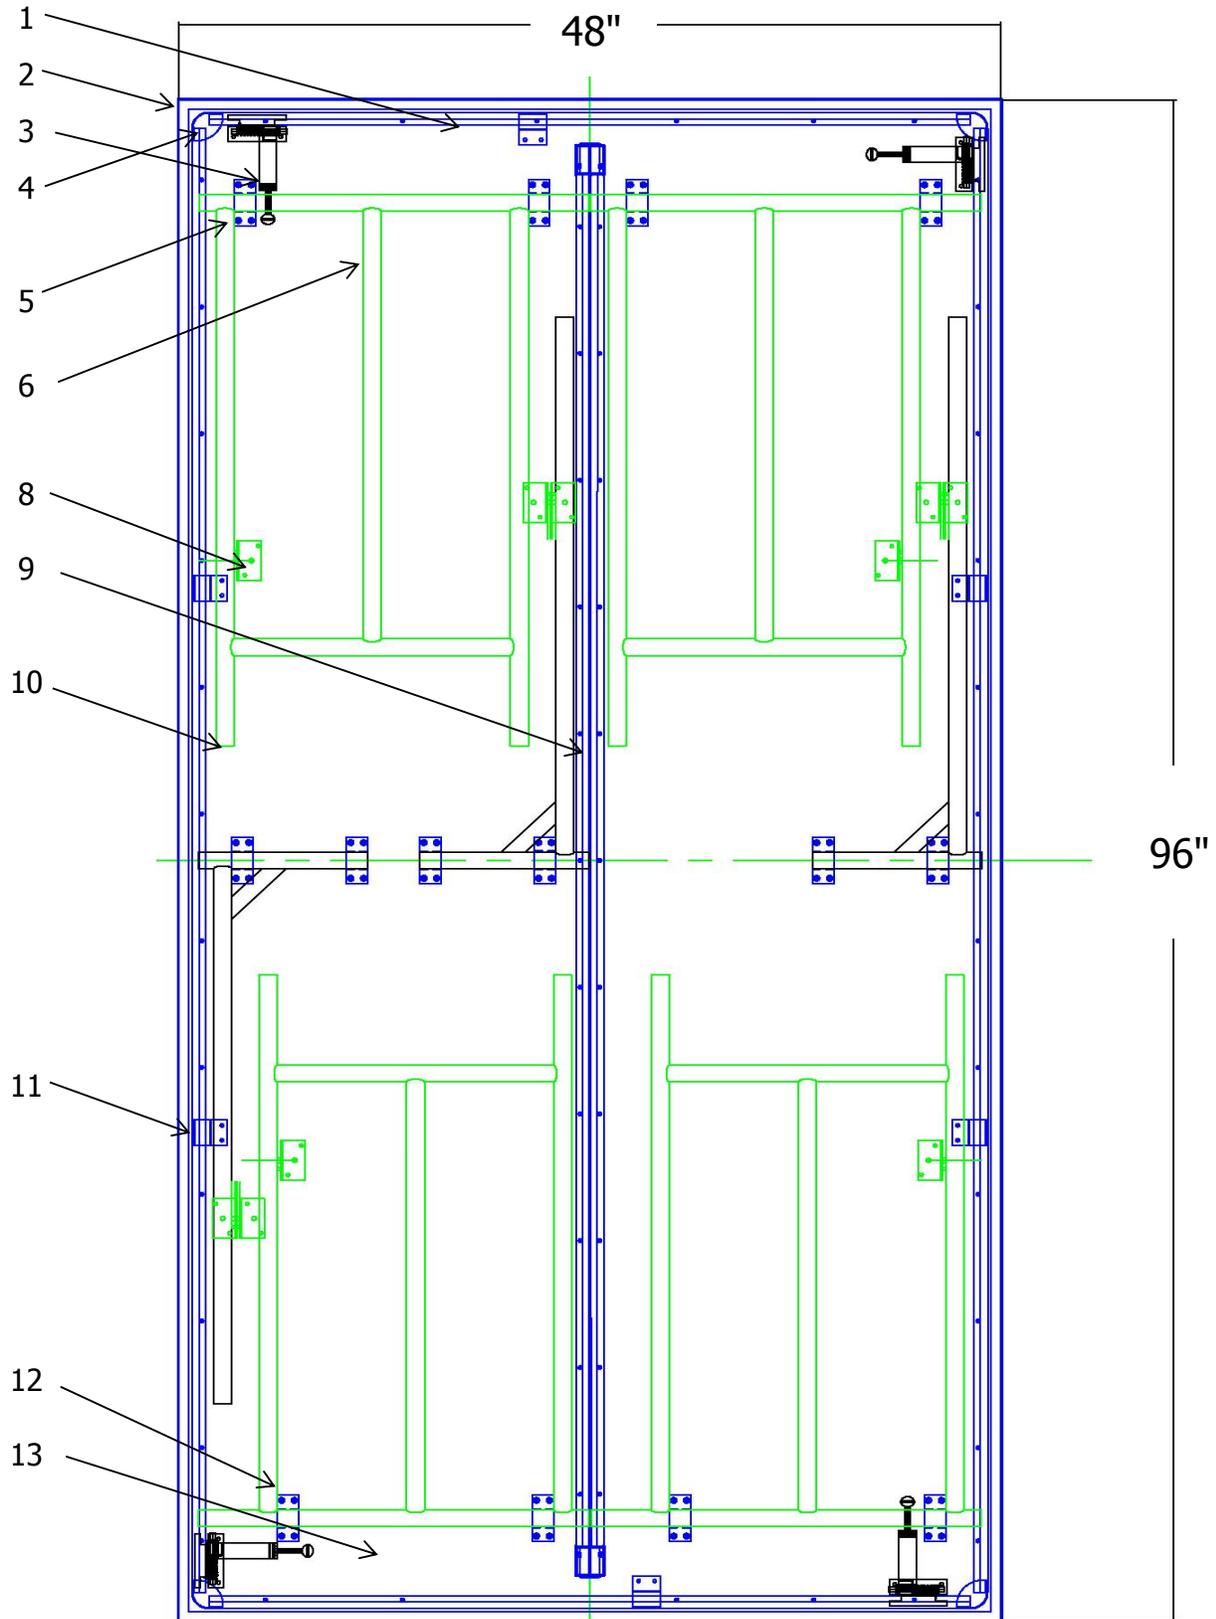

Green Information:

The Panelam material Mitchell sources has Plywood at its core. "Wood products such as plywood are manufactured to meet stringent product standards, including Voluntary Product Standard PS 1-07 for Structural Plywood. Wood products produced under these standards are manufactured only with moisture-resistant adhesives that meet Exterior or Exposure 1 bond classification. These adhesives, phenol formaldehyde and diphenylmethane diisocyanate (MDI), are chemically reacted into stable bonds during pressing. The final plywood products have such low formaldehyde emissions levels that they easily meet or are exempt from the world's leading formaldehyde emission standards and regulations:

1. US HUD STANDARDS This standard specifies a 0.20 ppm emission limit for (non-structural) plywood using the ASTM E1333 method. Because of its extremely low formaldehyde emission levels, Phenolic-bonded structural plywood is exempt from the testing and certification requirements of the standard.
2. CALIFORNIA AIR RESOURCES BOARD (CARB) AIR TOXIC CONTROL MEASURE FOR COMPOSITE WOOD PRODUCTS. This regulation, developed by a division of the California EPA, is considered the most stringent formaldehyde emissions regulation in the US. Definition No. 8 of the regulation explicitly exempts structural plywood."
